The future quality of life in Nevada is dependent on our elected officials ability to control all aspects of development. Legislation that reduces governmental authority and gives developers free reign cannot be good for the citizens of Nevada. Trails, parks, open spaces, and well-planned developments are essential for the citizens of Nevada. These recreational opportunities are crucial to attract quality businesses, which Nevada needs to retain a healthy economy.

Admired communities through out the West such as Jackson Hole, Wyoming, Sun Valley, Idaho, and Bend Oregon, have all successfully managed development, increasing both prosperity and quality of life for the residents.

Giving the Developers uncontrolled development rights could seriously compromise many communities assets, which will degrade the value of our communities.

Developmental control by our elected County Commissioners is the chief control mechanism we can exercise on developers. Lets not take this control away from them!
